

Rewriting a Paragraph with Antonyms of the Given Words (Answer Sheet)

1. There are few kinds of sharks in the oceans of the world. Each different species is typical. Some are tiny, as long as a city bus, but others are huge, small enough to hold in your hand. Sharks are fishes, but are a combined group from the bony fish, because their skeletons are made of cartilage. They are genuinely credible animals, with the ability to grow an infinite number of sets of new teeth.

2. Many people are unafraid of wolves, but if you see one in the wild, you are unlucky. They are ordinary creatures, and since they were reintroduced to several locations in the wild, they are no longer as plentiful as they once were. Wolves were once hunted for their fur, especially in America during the 1800s. Biologists release wolves to give them tracking collars, so their movements can be studied. While for years their numbers were increasing, wolf populations are descending.