

Rewriting a Paragraph with Antonyms of the Given Words

---

Read the paragraph below. Rewrite it by replacing each underlined word with an antonym from the list.

List: huge, tiny, typical, few, credible, combined

1. There are many kinds of sharks in the oceans of the world. Each different species is unique. Some are vast, as long as a city bus, but others are minuscule, small enough to hold in your hand. Sharks are fish, but are a separate group from the bony fish, because their skeletons are made of cartilage. They are genuinely incredible animals, with the ability to grow an infinite number of sets of new teeth.

Read the paragraph below. Rewrite it by replacing each underlined word with an antonym from the list.

List: unafraid, ordinary, unlucky, release, plentiful, descending, increasing

2. Many people are afraid of wolves, but if you see one in the wild, you are fortunate. They are magnificent creatures, and since they were reintroduced to several locations in the wild, they are no longer as scarce as they once were. Wolves were once hunted for their fur, especially in America during the 1800's. Biologists capture wolves to give them tracking collars, so their movements can be studied. While for years their numbers were decreasing, now the wolf populations are rising.